COURSE DESCRIPTION:

A little over 60 years ago, East Asia was a devastated region: China was torn apart by civil war and revolution, Japan was a defeated and occupied nation, the first Indochina War raged in Vietnam, and the Korean War was imminent with Soviet and US troops dividing that nation.

Today, East Asia is the world's most dynamic region. Japan is a prosperous democracy created from a legendary postwar economic miracle much admired throughout the world. South Korea, Taiwan, and Hong Kong are known as "little tigers" for their economic vitality, while China is rapidly rising to become a world power, generating much talk about the 21st century being the "Chinese century." Even communist Vietnam is undergoing some measure of reform to integrate into the global economy.

This course will examine the major revolutions and reforms since the 19th century that have brought East Asian nations to their respective status in the world today. The extraordinary events in the region, including ongoing events such as the transformation of China from communism to capitalism, have not only dramatically changed the political system, economic patterns, and social customs of East Asia and affected the lives of billions of people, but have also had a profound impact on the geopolitical world map. This special-topic course will prepare college students to understand this vibrant, changing region and help the intellectually active prepare for the increasingly diversified world that they are soon to enter.
